Case management

CASS is staffed by professional case managers who ensure the delivery of comprehensive, free case management and benefit coordination services. CASS Case Managers tailor care plans for each client, helping them identify their medical and physical needs, define their goals and link them to appropriate on-site or off-site services. CASS serves 15 counties in Northeast Iowa.

Additionally, case managers provide counseling to meet the psychosocial needs of clients and their families. This includes emotional support, health and risk-reduction education, and treatment-adherence counseling to ensure readiness for complex HIV treatments.

Information & referral

CASS has access to a variety of HIV information and resources. Case managers also work closely with local health care providers and community service organizations. The goal is to assist clients in finding medical and emotional care and also to increase the quality and consistency of financial and support services.

Anyone interested in obtaining information or making a referral can call 319.272.2437. Calls are confidential and welcome from those living with HIV, family members, significant others, students, friends and other interested persons.

In 1986, when the first cases of HIV infection were detected in Northeast Iowa, a group of concerned citizens began meeting in Waterloo and The AIDS Coalition of Northeast Iowa was formed.

In January of 1988, founding members realized the coalition's growth required the resources and infrastructure that could only be provided by an established institution. By March of 1988, the newly renamed, Cedar AIDS Support System (CASS) became part of Cedar Valley Hospice.

CASS provides free and confidential HIV case management for people living with HIV.
