

Moving Forward

Moving forward is something you have been doing since the day your loved one died. It is the essence of who we are as human beings; we move forward in our lives from all types of challenges and life changes. The ultimate challenge is the loss of someone we loved and will always love. They are the ones that help us move forward to the future challenges we will all continue to face. The memory of their love and the impact on our life will provide us with strength to endure.

Each of us have special memories of those we love. We remember what Dad told us about driving, we prepare the food the way Mom did, we raise the children the way our husband or wife would have done it, or when we mow the lawn we remember the things our partner did. Do we wonder how we will face an illness? Will we be as strong as our loved ones? We will have times when their voice enters into our lives on major decisions, as well as the smallest everyday task.

Moving forward will always include looking back. We will forever feel the love of those who have gone before us. We will share the wonderful memories we have of them. We will laugh again and feel the warmth of having them in our lives.

- Cedar Valley Hospice Grief Staff

This is the last in our series of mailings. Please remember, however, that Cedar Valley Hospice will always be there for you. If tough days hit, please call. We won't forget either!

Cedar Valley Hospice Offices:

Waterloo: 319.272.2002

Waverly: 319.352.1274

Independence: 319.334.6960

Grundy Center: 319.824.3868

Continued on back

“Grief is love not wanting to let go.”

- Earl Grollman, Grief Educator, Author, Rabbi

“And, in the end, this moving forward with that scar is the very best that we could hope for. You would not want to forget your loved one, as if he/she never existed or (had) not been an important part of your life. Those things that are important to you in your life are remembered and kept in the very special places of your heart and mind. This is no less true with regard to the loss of a beloved person. Keep this loss, treasure what you have learned from it, take the memories that you have from the person and the relationship and, in a healthy fashion, remember what should be remembered, hold on to what should be retained, and let go of that which must be relinquished. And then, as you continue on to invest emotionally in other people, goals, and pursuits, appropriately take your loved one with you, along with your new sense of self and new way of relating to the world, to enrich your present and future life without forgetting your important past.”

How To Go On Living When Someone You Love Dies. Therese Rando, Ph.D. Lexington Books. 1988.

Sources for additional information:

Websites

www.recover-from-grief.com/index.html: Focuses on recovery through creative grieving www.adec.org/resources/index.cfm: Offers additional online grief resources www.adultsiblinggrief.com: A support resource for surviving adult siblings www.cancercares.org: Offers support services for individuals affected by cancer www.candlelighters.org: Provides information for children with cancer and their families
www.centerforloss.com: Offers support & information for grieving individuals

Books

- Tuesdays with Morrie: An Old Man, a Young Man, and Life's Greatest Lesson, By: Mitch Albom
- How to Survive the Loss of a Love, By: Melba Colgrove
- Sad Isn't bad: A Good-Grief Guidebook for Kids Dealing with Loss, By: Michaelene Mundy
- What On Earth Do You Do When Someone Dies?, By: Trevor Romain
- Understanding Your Grief: Ten Essential Touchstones for Finding Hope and Healing Your Heart, By: Alan D. Wolfelt
- Healing Your Grieving Heart: 100 Practical Ideas, By: Alan D. Wolfelt