“Cedar Valley Hospice was very instrumental in improving Jerry’s quality of life. He spent less time in the hospital and more time enjoying life at home with me. Having their help was like having my own little angels right there.”

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is hospice care?

Hospice is a special kind of care focused on the physical, emotional, psychosocial and spiritual needs of terminally ill patients and their families. Hospice care treats the person rather than the disease; it focuses on quality and comfort. Patient and family members are involved in making decisions with a team of skilled and compassionate professionals, along with a patient’s primary care physician.

Who can be admitted to hospice and what does the process involve?

Cedar Valley Hospice services are for people with a life-limiting illness and a life expectancy estimated at six months or less. Both the doctor and patient agree to the need for care that provides comfort when curative treatment of a disease is no longer desired.

Should I wait for our physician to suggest hospice?

Anyone can make the call to Cedar Valley Hospice to inquire about services, including: the patient, family, clergy, friends or health care provider. If the patient’s physician has not made the referral to Cedar Valley Hospice, the staff can contact the physician for permission to admit them to our hospice program.

Are all hospices the same?

No. Although all hospices specialize in the care of life limiting illnesses, the array of care and services can differ widely among hospice providers. How much does hospice care cost - is it covered by insurance?

Cedar Valley Hospice care is available to anyone, regardless of their ability to pay. Medicare, Medicaid and most private insurance companies cover the costs of hospice services. Community contributions help cover costs for those who can't pay.
